WASHINGTON LETTER.

Special to the News:

Washington, Feb. 17, 1899.

An extra session of the next Congress is now absolutely certain, unless either the President or the democratic Senators who are opposing the Hull army bill make a square backdown. Before leaving for Boston last week the President repeated his assertion made the first of the week that he would call an extra session if the army bill was not passed and the democratic senators still say they will not allow the bill to pass. If the Senate kills as much time over everything else as it did this week over the McNary resolution, other measures besides the army bill are likely to fail.

The warmest fight of the session in the House took place over the Hepburn Nicaragua Canal Bill, which was offered as an amendment to the Sunday Civil Bill. Party lines were not drawn. It was a fight against the leaders of the majority, all of whom opposed the amendment. Representative Hopkins of Illinois, who was presiding, sustained the point of order raised against the amendment by Representative Cannon, and the House by a vote of 127 to 109 stood by the decision.

The action of the Senate in passing the bill for the admission of the Naval Academy as a cadet of Oscar W. Deignan, of Iowa, one of the Merrimac heroes gives general satisfaction. It is a deserved recognition of a common sailor.

News of daily fighting in the Philippines continues to arrive, but it is all one way; the Filipinos can not stand before the American troops any better than the Spanish did.

Those who consider the McNary resolution, adopted by the Senate, with an attendance only three in excess of a quorum, by a vote of 26 to 22, have a distinctive meaning will have a hard time proving that meaning by the vote on the resolution. It was supported by sixteen republicans, including Senator Hale, while it was opposed by eight republicans, including Senator Hoar, who said of the resolution: "It contains little that is good and much that is bad." The democrats, silver republicans and populists also divided on the resolution, six democrats voting for and eleven against, while Senator Kyle and Teller voted for and Pettigrew and Stewart against. It is very clear from the vote that Senators differ as to whether the resolution may be considered favorable to expansion or against it. Lots of them do not hesitate to say that it neither; that if it were adopted and signed by the House and signed by the President it would have absolutely no effect in determining the future policy of this government towards the Philippines. It would be difficult to make anything more ambiguous than the McNary resolution, which follows: "That by the ratification of the treaty of peace with Spain it is not intended to incorporate the inhabitants of the Philippine Islands into citizenship of the U. S. Nor is it intended to permanently annex said islands as an integral part of the territory of the U. S., but it is the intention of the U. S. to establish on said islands a government suitable to the wants and conditions of the inhabitants of said islands." Whether the House will act upon this resolution will depend largely upon the wishes of the President, but the chances are that it will not.

The real sentiment of the Senate towards the Philippines was very near being shown in the vote on Senator Bacon's substitute for the McNary resolution, which pledged this government to deal with the Philippines just as it is now dealing with Cuba—merely taking charge until a permanent local Chamberlain's Cough Remedy.

This remedy is intended especially for coughs, colds, croup, whooping cough and influenza. It has become famous for its cures of these diseases, over a large part of the civilized world. The most flattering testimonials have been received, giving accounts of its good works, of the aggravating and persistent coughs it has cured; of severe colds that have yielded promptly to its soothing effects, and of the dangerous attacks of croup it has cured, often saving the life of the child. The extensive use of it for whooping cough has shown that it cures that disease of all dangerous consequences. It is especially prized by mothers for their children, as it never fails to effect a speedy cure, and because they have found that there is not the least danger in giving it, even to babies, as it contains nothing injurious. Said by J. L. Smith.
